UCOFA DIRECTOR MESSAGE

Dear Ulster County Older Adults!

Just because the snow flies, doesn't mean we come to a halt!

We received the good news that Zumba will continue! I know a lot of you were concerned about that. Our Hub activities continue all year!

We will be having some holiday celebrations, a tea, a couple of midday dinners. We just began a new pilot program where we can set up live virtual tours to various places in the U.S. and other countries. We recently went to Dublin Ireland and New York City. It was lots of fun! Please note that many other places in the area offer dinners, activities, social events, and other holiday celebrations as well – your local libraries, senior centers and Towns are good places to start – just take a look at their online calendars.

A few precautions to take for winter. Make sure your phone is charged if you know bad weather is coming – do you have gas in your car? Warm blankets? Water? A flashlight that works at home, and some shelf stable food and a can opener? And don't forget plenty of water for drinking and washing. We will be offering a generator class on ways to be able to manage power outages soon, so stay tuned. The County always offers a place to go in case you need shelter, and if your home is too cold for you.

Holidays got you down? Try reaching out to someone. Volunteer. Read to children. Have tea with a friend. Listen to favorite music. Read a book you love again. Go see a high school play (there's lots of good drama clubs around!). Sometimes folks struggle through the holidays. There are resources to help. Just reach out. Although holidays are always framed as cheery, warm and inviting, for many they are tough, especially if you are alone. We have things to do here – just call! If you live alone and would like to receive a friendly call from one of our volunteers each week call our office. And everyone stay warm, toasty and safe! Winter is upon us!

In health.

Fake Holiday Charities Scams Targets Retirees and Older Adults

The holidays are supposed to be a season of generosity, family and giving back. But there's a darker side to this generosity. Scammers know that retirees and older adults are among the most generous members of our communities, and they exploit that kindness to line their own pockets. Millions of dollars are stolen through fake "charities" that pop up just before the holidays. Their calls, letters and emails look legitimate, but the money never reaches those in need. Instead, it funds criminals who are ready to strike again.

Retirees and older adults often give more generously than other groups. Scammers know this, and they know how to tailor their pitch.

Emotional appeals: Fraudsters will mention children, veterans or natural disaster victims to tug at heartstrings.

Polite persistence: Retirees and older adults tend to answer calls and engage longer on the phone, which scammers see as an opportunity.

Data exposure: Your name, age, phone number and even donation history can already be found online through data brokers. That means scammers don't need to guess; they target you because they know you've donated before.

When you combine generosity with publicly available data, scammers see retirees and older adults as the "perfect donors." How do you know if a charity request is real or just a scam dressed up for the holidays? Look for these warning signs:

Pressure to act fast: If a caller insists you donate "right now" or tries to guilt you into giving before you hang up, it's likely a scam. Real charities welcome donations anytime.

No details about how money is used: Authentic charities can explain where funds go. Scammers use vague promises like "helping the needy" without specifics.

Untraceable payment methods: Requests for gift cards, wire transfers or peer-to-peer app transfers (like Venmo or Zelle) are instant red flags.

Lookalike names: Fraudsters often invent names that sound similar to well-known charities, like "Veterans Hope Relief" or "Children's Aid International."

Caller ID tricks: Scammers can spoof numbers to make it look like they're calling from a local area code or even a real charity office.

Here's how to protect yourself while still supporting the causes that matter to you:

Research the charity's name: Before donating, search it on sites like Charity Navigator or the Better Business Bureau's Wise Giving Alliance at give.org/. If it doesn't appear there, that's a red flag.

Ask for written information: Real organizations will happily mail or email details about their mission, budgets and how donations are used.

Verify tax-exempt status: Use the IRS Tax-Exempt Organization Search at Irs.gov/charities-and-nonprofits to confirm the charity is legitimate.

Check how much goes to the cause: Some charities are real but inefficient, spending more on salaries than programs. Make sure your donation actually helps.

Even if the charity itself is real, you need to protect how you give:

- Use a credit card rather than a debit card because credit cards offer stronger fraud protection.
- Never give payment info over the phone if you didn't initiate the call.
- Donate through the charity's official website instead of clicking links in unsolicited emails.
- Keep records of your donations for tax purposes and to spot anything suspicious later.

3 Lesser Known Risks of Poor Oral Care

We learned the basics of caring for our teeth and gums as children, but as many people age, their oral hygiene becomes less of a priority. This often leads to a number of dental problems. Among adults aged 65 and older:

- 30% have broken and decayed teeth
- Over 40% have puffy, infected gums
- Over 23% have no teeth at all

1. Malnutrition: Teeth that are severely worn, broken down, or missing make it very difficult for older adults to chew foods like meat, vegetables, and nuts. They tend to avoid these key sources of nutrients, and instead turn to foods that are softer and easier to chew and tend to be high in sugar and salt.

Diets lacking protein and important vitamins and minerals can cause malnutrition, which can lead to physical deterioration, falls, a weakened immune system, and chronic conditions like diabetes or heart disease.

2. Loneliness: The damage from oral diseases can trigger feelings of personal embarrassment. Our smile is our first introduction to others, and when it is framed with stained and/or missing teeth, the decline in appearance causes many seniors to lose self-confidence and avoid social interactions.

Older adults want to feel good, look good, and be confident. When they don't, they isolate themselves. This can lead to loneliness, which has real physical and mental health implications. It affects mortality, and increases your risk of anxiety, depression, and cognitive decline.

3. Illnesses: The same germs that cause gum pain, bad breath, and tooth decay also have the potential to enter your bloodstream, travel to other organs in your body, and cause diseases. For example, pus from swollen gums can migrate to the heart and lungs and induce respiratory infections like pneumonia. Additionally, conditions like periodontal disease have been shown to have strong links to other chronic diseases, like heart disease and cancer.

If you've been neglecting your oral hygiene, it's time to start taking it seriously—because malnutrition, loneliness, and acute and chronic illnesses are not things to joke about.

Garden tips for December

- As houseplants grow more slowly in December light, cut down on watering by half until active growth resumes in the spring.
- Apply a layer of winter mulch to protect your perennials after the first few freezes.
- Look over the stored vegetables frequently and remove decaying specimens.
- Drain the fuel tank of the lawn mower or tiller before putting the machine away for the winter.

Healthy Eating Tips for the Holidays

It is Holiday Time once again! It is time to share good times and good foods with friends and family. The big challenge is to have fun at special occasions without jeopardizing some of the healthy practices you have worked on throughout the year.

Here are some Helpful Hints to help you to survive the Holiday Season:

Manage Stress. This time of year can be stressful. Be careful not to turn to food as a way to provide comfort. Exercise, Meditation, Meeting with Family and Friends are just a few ways to reduce stress.

Stay Hydrated! Often we misunderstand a feeling of Thirst as Hunger. Drink Plenty of fluids/ water throughout the day, every day to stay well hydrated. It can also help to diminish that desire to overeat.

Do not arrive hungry to the party! Skipping meals before a holiday party in an effort to save calories for the big party will only make you overeat. Eat a light meal or snack before arriving at the party. A snack or meal that is high in fiber and contains lean protein is ideal because it can help control your appetite and help you avoid overeating.

Choose the right plate. You are more likely to eat food that ends up on your plate. Thus, choosing a smaller plate will not only prevent you from filling your plate with more items than you really need, but it will also make the amount of food on your plate seem larger.

Fill up on vegetables and fruits. Not only do these foods have plenty of vitamins and minerals, but they also contain fiber, which helps keep you full longer and may leave less room for other high-calorie foods.

Bring something to the party. Offer to bring an appetizer, side, or dessert to the party. Not only will the host or hostess appreciate the help, but you'll also have control over what goes into the dish.

Be Merry. Spread holiday cheer by spending time enjoying the company of others at the party. The more you talk, the less time you will spend eating.

Balance your meals. Aim to fill half your plate with vegetables, a quarter with lean protein, and a quarter with starch.

Enjoy this festive time of year!

December Activities for Seniors

The Christmas and holiday season is a special time filled with warmth, joy, and the comforting embrace of family and friends.

Participating in Christmas and holiday activities not only stirs a sense of nostalgia but also sparks joy, fosters connections, and nurtures the spirit.

Here are some activities for Seniors during the month of December:

Decorate for the holidays: The festive atmosphere is very important, and the embodiment of the festive atmosphere is holiday decoration. Prepare to buy Christmas and holiday decorations in advance with your family or friends, and complete this ordinary and warm task together.

Make Christmas and holiday cards: Many people, including Seniors, find it hard to express their feelings. At this time, we can convey it through cards. We can write what we want to say to our family and old friends on the card to let them know our love.

Bake Christmas and holiday-themed cookies: Red and green cookies or desserts are also one of the important sources of Christmas and holiday atmosphere. Surprise your family and friends with your heirloom recipes or inventive twists from years of experience. It doesn't matter if you don't know how to bake before, we can have plenty of time to learn. Food is not only a taste, but also an obsession and love.

Watch Christmas and holiday movies: A good Christmas or holiday movie sets the mood better, too, right? We watch these movies year after year, and even know some of the lines by heart, but somehow we never get tired of them. Picking up a classic Christmas or holiday themed movie, making some popcorn, and grabbing a cozy blanket are the simple joys that really brighten our days.

Share memories with others: When people get older, they always like to be nostalgic and can't help but think of the days and things before. And December is a great month for reminiscing and sharing these things. Because December is cold enough, people need warm things to warm their hearts. Share what you experienced when you were young with your family and friends so that they can see what you were like.

Participate in community events: December is usually a time when the community comes alive with various activities. From carols and light shows to holiday markets and charity events, there's something you'll want to see. Put on your warmest coat, hat and scarf for these gatherings. This is not only an opportunity to enjoy holiday cheer, but also to meet new people and connect with the community.

Do indoor gardening: It is not suitable for planting outside in winter, but it is suitable for indoor gardening. Raising flowers and grass not only exercises the body, but also cultivates one's emotions. Imagine looking out at a deserted landscape and looking inside at a garden full of spring scenery.

Read some books: Live till you are old and read till you are old. Books are equal to everyone, no matter how old they are, they can read them. Choose a novel you like and have a cup of hot chocolate. Both your mind and body will feel warm.

Make handicrafts: Making handicrafts not only kills time, but also brings you a lot of fun. It's time to gather colored paper, ribbons, beads, and any craft supplies you have to create something special. You can make ornaments for your Christmas tree, you can knit a cozy scarf, or even make a holiday wreath. It's much more fun to make with other people - grandchildren, friends, or others at a community center.
